MANY PRISONERS TAKEN BY ALLIES

Official reports of the French War Office today strengthen the indications contained in earlier dispatches that the allied armies are winning the great battle that has been proceeding for seventeen days in northeastern France.

A Paris announcement issued at 3 p. m. says that night and day attacks of the Germans have been repulsed by the left wing of the allies to the north of the Somme and between the Somme and the Aisne, and that the French and British have more than held their own in other parts of the 120-mile battle line, taking many prisoners, chiefly from the Eleventh, Tenth, Twelfth, Fifteenth and Nineteenth German Army Corps. At the centre, in the Champagne district and east of Argonne, heavy bombardment by the Germans continues.

It is significant that the German government has maintained silence today regarding the operations in France, while telegrams received in London say that the Germans have been forced from some of their strong positions along the Aisne. General von Klueke, on the German right, it is believed, has been forced further back.

In the opinion of competent authorities, big movements are under way on the part of the French and British, which, it is believed, will terminate the fight in favor of the allies before the end of the present week. An unconfirmed report from Brussels says that city is full of German troops, which fact is basis for the rumor that the German army in France has begun to retreat.

Unofficial estimates of the losses to date in the Battle of the Aisne put the German total at 150,000 killed, wounded and missing, and that of the allies at 100,000.

E. Ashmead Bartlett, military expert of the London Times, writing to the AMERICAN, says 100,000 fresh troops, reinforcing the allies, would make the defeat of the Germans decisive. He says: "If the German right be turned, he must abandon his fortified positions along the line of the Oise, the plateau of Craonne and the Aisne and withdraw his immense forces through Belgium or Luxembourg, by way of the narrow Steuay pass, which is an extremely difficult task."

"The enemy's progress in France is stopped, and he knows

BRAVES FINAL OF YEAR HERE

CHICAGO. South, C. F. Good, C. F. Baker, L. Zimmerman, Th. Schaller, Lt. Storer, Th. Maraville, M. Archer, E. Lavender, Jr.

By NICK FLATLEY.

Everybody got for the last home game of the Braves season. The champions play Chicago today, and their season in Boston is done. They leave this afternoon for New York where the little old pennant is rare to be clinched beyond all hope of loss. They open in New York tomorrow with a double-header.

This afternoon's battle will start at 2 o'clock. The Braves are likely to grab the 5 o'clock rather for the Big Top, so that they can get over and put in a good night's sleep before their season in Boston is done. They leave this afternoon for New York where the little old pennant is rare to be clinched beyond all hope of loss. They open in New York tomorrow with a double-header.

GERMANS RECOUPY WAR LOSSES IN BELGIUM

it. Apart from the Russian advance on Berlin, which cannot much longer be delayed, fresh crops, which are so absolutely necessary to provide a great driving wedge to pierce some vulnerable position of the enemy's line, can only be provided by Great Britain.

"The effect of the arrival of 100,000 fresh troops at this critical juncture would prove decisive."

BUDAPEST NOW IN DANGER.

Startlingly emphasizing the power and dash of the Russian sweep in Austria is the announcement of the Russian embassy in London that the Czar's troops have penetrated Hungary as far as Ungvár, only 170 miles northwest of Budapest. The passage of the Carpathians was attended with very little resistance, apparently, from the Austro-German forces.

Petrograd officially announces today that the Russians are rapidly pushing their offensive movement in the forests of Angström in Suwalki province. The attempt by the Germans with the aid of the large siege guns to capture the fortress of Oswowetz has been checked.

The Russian pursuit of the Austrians in Galicia might be compared with General Grant's pursuit of General Lee's army in the Civil War. The Russian pursuers have already traversed over half the route between Przemyśl and Crecow and are now only four marches distant from the latter town, where the combined German and Austrian forces are preparing to make a determined stand. If the Russian reports, in the main, are undisputed by Vienna, the true, the Czar's armies are now on the point of securing the whole of Galicia, from Rumania to the Carpathians. The Austrians, it would seem, are flying before the Russian advance guard, which is sweeping along at a tremendous pace, and it is not likely that any serious resistance will be given by the Russians until they are ready to attack Crecow.

GERMANS RECOUPY MALINES.

German activity in Belgium increases. According to an official Antwerp dispatch Malines has been recaptured and the movement against Antwerp continues. The forts at Wavre, St. Catherine and Waelham, about ten miles from the temporary capital, have been furiously bombarded, but apparently without serious damage. West of Waelham the offensive movement of the Germans was checked with heavy losses. Shells dropping in the city of Alost have caused considerable destruction.

A Rotterdam cable says 25,000 German naval reserves from the North Sea have been rushed to Belgium, presumably to be used against Antwerp.

While the German aeroplane that dropped bombs into Paris on Sunday has been brought down and the aviator killed, according to today's cables, Zeppelin raids in Belgium continue, a segment at Deynze being damaged by a bomb early today. The same airship dropped two bombs at Thiel.

An unofficial dispatch from Cetinje says that the Serbian and Montenegrin army before Sarajevo, capital of Bosnia, has begun the bombardment of the city.

The French fleet, according to a dispatch dated last Sunday, had then been bombarding Cattaro, the Austrian stronghold on the Dalmatian coast, for forty-eight hours. The French embassy at Washington today denied the report that the Austrian forts had sunk a large French warship.

In the far East the Japanese and British have driven back the outer defenses of the Germans in Kia-Chiao.

ANTWERP, Sept. 28.—After a severe bombardment the Germans have captured Malines, a town of 100,000 inhabitants, and are now in the city, according to an official announcement given out today.

It is reported that Burgomaster M. de Brouckere, who was released on the payment of $50,000 by the British, has been released by the British.

The official statement of the Belgian government follows: "After the bombardment of Malines the German army has moved on to Antwerp, but has not yet entered the city."

Only 14 Counties in Kentucky Now in 'Wet' Column

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Sept. 28.—Only fourteen of the 120 counties of Kentucky are in the "wet" column as the result of the local option election, in which nine more went "dry." Counties voting to abolish the saloon were Carroll, Montgomery, Macon, Bell, Boone, Clark, Shelby, Bourbon and Scott. Three counties, Davies, McCracken and Christian, voted to retain bars.

This was the coldest September 28 ever saw—so far as the records and the memory of the oldest inhabitant go. The temperature at 4 o'clock this morning was 34 degrees, after a night of light frost.

Today was also the coldest September day except one that Boston has known. In 1873, September 28 equaled today's low mark, with 34 degrees. The coldest previous September 28 was 1898, when the temperature was 40 degrees.

Incidentally last Thursday was the hottest September 28 on record. "Fair and rising tomorrow" is today's prediction, so take heed.

GO TO CHURCH FOR PEACE NEXT SUNDAY

Catholic Societies Head Endorses Plan for Peace

The Catholics of the United States should take initiative for the creation and fostering of world peace. Public sentiment should be quickened and Congress impurported to cause this nation to make the first overtures for a serious, sincere and lasting agreement among the peoples on the earth for international peace.—PRESIDENT CHARLES I. DENECHIAN of American Federation of Catholic Societies at Baltimore.

There has begun a New England wide movement among the clergy to make the church attendance next Sunday a record. On that day will be observed "Prayers-for-Peace-Day" as appointed by President Wilson, and everywhere the demand of New Englanders for peace will be voiced from the pulpit.

PLEASE FOR PEACE BY CHILDREN OF BAY STATE

The children in Massachusetts will unite with children in other parts of the United States in sending a peace letter to every monarch of Europe.

The contents of this letter has been drawn up by the Children's Peace Petition Committee, of which Miss Elizabeth Turner of Massachusetts is a member.

The voices of children from all over America may move the monarchs of Europe to plan for peace. This is the letter which will be sent, when signed by many children in every State, to the following monarchs: The Emperor and King of Austria-Hungary, the King of Belgium, the President of the French Republic, the King of Great Britain, the Emperor of Germany, the Emperor of Mexico, the King of Montenegro and the Czar of Russia.

Let us make next Sunday a day of prayer for the peace of the nation. The service which I have sent throughout the diocese may be used with any services of that day. Any reference to the subject of peace will always carry with it the great message of Christianity of "Peace on Earth, Good Will Toward Men."

Let us get every one of our little ones to church next Sunday. It can be done through church organization of the day. Make the day interesting for all. Let the children in the Sunday school make a list of all the children who have signed the letter. Let them make it a day long to be remembered for this. I have urged, every organization connected with my church to take up the matter each Sunday every one to pray for peace on earth.

MORE TRADING IN STOCKS A HOPEFUL SIGN

By W. H. ROSS, Financial Editor.

According to an eminent London banker, English surplus stocks must be sold, more than ever, before the future of the United States, where the future is so uncertain, can be secured. He says large amounts of money are accumulating in England awaiting opportunity for investment. If this is true, there is less danger of wholesale liquidation of American securities by British investors when the exchange is reopened. A story to the effect in London is that within a few weeks, as in London, in New York, it is said that between the two cities, the exchange has been trading in daily exchange between the two cities. Another statement is that the London stock market is not so strong as it was in the summer of 1914. There is much more confidence in the London stock market than there was in the summer of 1914. BOSTON AMERICAN

80 AND 87 SUMMER ST., BOSTON, SEPT. 29, 1914.

A Newspaper Is a PERSON--- Not Merely a FACTORY

And the PERSONALITY, Fortunately, Is the Thing that Cannot Be Bought, Artificially Created, or Successfully Imitated.

Copyright, 1914, by Star Company

Many people, merchants and others, ask about the circulation of the Boston AMERICAN.

In St. Paul's Cathedral an announcement says of the great architect Wren that if you want to know how great he was look about you.

The best statement concerning the Boston AMERICAN's circulation perhaps would be, "sit down in any railroad train, elevated, surface or subway street car, and look about you."

The actual figures of circulation are made by all of the newspapers to the government as required by law. And in the case of the important newspapers at least these statements are accurate.

The circulation of this newspaper, as testified to under oath, was 371,911 daily, and 352,937 Sunday, for the six months ending March 31.

The circulation since that time has been bigger. It exceeded, for instance, 380,000 per day in April, May, June and July, and 430,000 net paid per day in August.

What these people really want to know is WHY the Boston AMERICAN has the greatest circulation in New England. The answer to that is, A NEWSPAPER IS A PERSON, A LIVING INDIVIDUAL. IT IS NOT THE MERE PRODUCT OF PRINTING PRESSES, OR A HIGHLY ORGANIZED, WELL PAID STAFF, OR A WONDERFUL DISTRIBUTING SYSTEM.

The successful newspaper is THE EXPRESSION OF PERSONALITY.

To make a newspaper successful and keep it successful, REAL PERSONALITY MUST RESIDE IN IT AND FIND EXPRESSION THROUGH IT.

We recommend to the editors of the little papers, who are sometimes puzzled by their "returns" and by the strange psychology of the public that prefers the wicked wily journalist to their pure, soulful product, a saying of Goethe's:

"Volk und Knecht und Ueberwinder verstehen zu jeder Zeit, hoechstes Glueck der Erdenkinder sei nur die Persoenlichkeit."

Which means:

"The people, and slaves and conquerors, admit at all times the greatest happiness of the earth's children is personality only."

What is "PERSONALITY"? That is the question—and it won't be answered for many a day.

Why is it that Maude Adams—quiet, thin, not very powerful physically—can exercise an influence utterly unknown to thousands of ladies much bigger, fatter, and even more beautiful?

How and why does William J. Bryan, with a few platitudes on peace, delight his audience in a fashion incomprehensible to the yodelers and sword swallowers that compete with him? And how does "Abe" Erlanger manage and intimidate many men twice as tall as he is?

Every successful enterprise is based on personality. And when that personality goes out of the enterprise it may stagger along for a while, taking some time to die out, just as the body takes time to cool off when life is done.

But the personality is the life.

You can destroy it, but you cannot create it.

It can't be successfully imitated, it cannot be manufactured.

That has been the serious trouble with rich gentlemen who have put their money into newspapers. They are like individuals combining to create an expensive watch by putting in everything but the MAINSPRING.

Personality creates its own atmosphere, finds its own tools and machinery, gathers together its public and keeps it.

It exists in everything in the great mercantile business, the great industrial plants, the successful farms, where you can see the personality of the farmers in every field and in every team of horses; makes the success of the actor, the artist, and, above all, it IS the newspaper.

For the newspaper is only A VOICE. It talks in words and in pictures.

In a crowded room a dull, dead, monotonous voice BELIEVING NOTHING, hoping for nothing, striving for nothing, would not long be listened to.

And in this crowded world the dull, dead, monotonous voice of the newspaper that lacks personality, principle, purpose, ardent belief, cannot expect to be listened to.

The public will endure much imperfection, bad taste, mistakes, violence in utterance, almost anything if the power of personality and WILL are there.

But the public will not forgive banality, which is the absence of character and personality.

That is why we have many little newspapers, tottering on the brink of ruin, falling down the bank occasionally, to be pulled up by some gentleman with money, and then falling down again.

It can be told that the greatest proof of their weakness is the fact that they experiment and keep on trying, struggling along their impossible lines; the fact that they do NOT understand why the Boston AMERICAN has the greatest circulation in New England.

DO YOU KNOW THAT—

There are 1,593 policemen in Boston and only 983 firemen? And the police force costs $2,509,908 to maintain, while the fire department costs only $1,924,914.

We Are Safe While the Earth Spins

If It Should Suddenly Stop the Atmosphere Would Turn Into a Thousand-Mile-an-Hour Hurricane, and the Atlantic Ocean Would Pour Over Europe

By GARRETT P. SERVISS

Copyright, 1914, by International News Service

It is an established fact that the earth revolves on its axis once every twenty-four hours. Now, assuming that the atmosphere travels along, up to a certain distance from the earth, at what distance does it begin to lose its velocity? Or to what height would an aeroplane have to ascend to enable it to again descend in a vertical line and find itself at a different part of the globe than the starting point?

This question, from a successful business man, shows the persistence of popular errors concerning many of the phenomena of nature that are continually before us.

No matter how high an aviator or balloonist might ascend, he would still find the atmosphere revolving bodily with the earth beneath him. Except for the effects of local winds, or air currents, blowing now one way and now another, he would remain vertically above the point from which he started.

Wild Wind Would Arise

The whole atmosphere revolves with the solid earth because it is in contact with it and subject to its attraction. If we could imagine a time when the earth was standing still, with the atmosphere surrounding it like a gaseous shell, and then suppose the globe suddenly to begin to rotate on its axis, a terrific wind would instantly arise, blowing in a direction opposite to that of the rotation. This would be due to the inertia of the air, which could not immediately take up the motion imparted to it by the friction of the spinning globe. A similar law affects the water of the oceans.

But after awhile the particles of air in contact with the globe would begin to revolve in step with it, they would gradually impart the same motion to the particles above them; these to others still higher, and so on until the entire atmosphere should share the common motion. Except its own inertia, there would be nothing to oppose this tendency of the atmosphere to assume the same angular rate of rotation as that of the globe on which it rests, because the space outside the atmosphere is empty, and consequently offers no resistance through friction.

There is one circumstance, however, which sets a limit to the height to which an atmosphere has been variously calculated at from 21,000 to 25,000 miles. At the earth's present rate of rotation, amounting to an equatorial speed of about a thousand miles an hour, the centrifugal force, at the equator, is equal to one 29th of the force of gravity. Now, since centrifugal force increases as the square of the velocity, if the rotation were 17 times faster than it actually is, bodies on the earth's surface would cease to have any weight, or, in other words, would cease to be bound to the earth by gravity. This follows from the fact that the square of 17 is 289. The slightest further increase of speed would send them flying away into space.

Such Height Is Doubtful But it is doubtful if the earth ever had an atmosphere approaching any such extreme height. At the present time the atmosphere appears to extend upward only two or three hundred miles at the most, and there is not enough air at a height exceeding fifty miles to produce any perceptible effects upon the sunlight passing through it. Filled balloons have ascended ten miles or more, but human life could not be maintained without artificial aids at an elevation much exceeding five or six miles, and then only under the most favorable circumstances. At about forty miles above the earth the excessive thin air reflects enough light to produce faint twilight effects, and meteors are sometimes seen flashing out at a height of from eight to a hundred miles in the case of their fiery disintegration. There is still, at such elevations, sufficient air to set fire by friction to a solid body rushing through it at a speed of twenty or thirty miles per second. But it can be shown that these effects would be produced by an atmosphere rather than that in an exhausted air pump receiver.

Yet, while the atmosphere as a whole shares the rotation of the earth, the latter induces certain aerial movements which have vast importance in human affairs. Among them movements of the air resulting from the earth's rotation are the trade winds, which, on both sides of the equator, have a constant westward trend, because the air in them is moving from the poles toward the equator, and the eastward motion of the surface beneath them increases in actual, though not in angular, speed as the equator is approached.

Sources Seem Different

The inertia of the air prevents it from taking up this increase immediately, and thus the wind seems to come from the north-east in the northern hemisphere and from left to right in the southern. But this does not change the fact that, taken as a whole, the atmosphere revolves as if it were a part of the globe to which it is attached.

There are many other interesting effects of the earth's rotation on the winds, such as the cyclical motion of cyclones, which always turn from right to left in the northern hemisphere and from left to right in the southern. But this does not change the fact that, taken as a whole, the atmosphere revolves as if it were a part of the globe to which it is attached.

When a Girl's in Love

Dorothy Dix Tells Some of the Signs by Which a Young Man May Know That the Object of His Affections Will Not Turn a Deaf Ear to His Pleading

By DOROTHY DIX

AN anxious youth asks me how a man can tell whether a girl is really in love with him, or is just flirting. Why, bless you, son, it is as easy as falling off a log. A woman in love is the most direct-away proposition on earth. She couldn't desire a blind babe if he didn't want to be deceived. The signs and symptoms of the tender passion break out on her like the measles, and are so apparent and unmistakable that it doesn't take a diagnostician to recognize them at once.

He who runs may read, but—and stick a pin in this point, son—in judging whether a girl is in love with you or not go by the way she acts, and not by what she says. Words are cheap. Especially with the female sex. Put no faith in them. At lovers' perjuries, they say, Jove laughs. He must have woman's voice of devotion. They are so often sugar coated lies that men's vanity leads them to swallow whole.

Flirtation, pay no attention to a girl's honeyed talk. It's the bait the little spider has set to lure flies into her parlor, but keep a wary eye out to see what she does when you're about.

Do not be misled by the warmth of a girl's welcome when you go to see her, or the fact that she calls you up on the telephone, and invites you around if you fail to show up with your usual regularity. This is simply business. Custom does not permit a girl to go out and pick out the one man in the world she likes for a husband.

The Very First Sign

Her only chance is to gather all the men she can about her in the hopes that among the bunch there will be the one particular "He." Also to be a belle, to be admired, gives a girl the reputation of such a girl in her little world. Hence she plays up her smile of jocular greeting to every man who comes along. It's just a show of the teeth in the game and has no personal significance, though many men never find this out.

The first unmistakable sign that a girl gives of being in love with you, son, is when she begins to prefer the back parlor to the theatre or a dance. As long as a girl wants you to be forever nothing around to some place of amusement, she regards you merely as a pleasant means to a agreeable end. You are her opera and supper ticket, so to speak.

She may find you entertaining, agreeable, congenial, but she isn't in love with you. When she does fall in love for keeps she will begin to prefer the lamp turned low in her own home to the footlights, and her idea of a perfectly thrilling evening is to sit alone with you.

When she begins to show symptoms of staying-at-home-itis, you may rest assured that she has made a very considerable dent in her little heart.

The next way to test a maiden's real affection for you is to try her on a monologue about your early youth. This is, indeed, an acid test of a girl's affection. If it is genuine, you will be able to tell.

When a girl is in love with you, she will stand for the reminiscences of her early life, and she will face the old boy and bid the cat under the bed.

Thereafter, if Maude does not yawn in your face when you speli along about your youthful adventures, you are safe.

Thereafter, if Maude does not yawn in your face when you speli along about your youthful adventures, you are safe.

Thereafter, if Maude does not yawn in your face when you speli along about your youthful adventures, you are safe.

Thereafter, if Maude does not yawn in your face when you speli along about your youthful adventures, you are safe.

And if she acts up the stories of your schoolboy days, you may pop the question with the certainty that she is yours, for the asking.

A Matter of Observation

Next, observe a girl's demeanor to you when you take her out if you would ascertain whether she is in love with you, or merely strutting you along until the right man appears on the scene. If she is always urging you to spend money, if she is constantly handing out hints about flowers and candy, and if, when you take her to a restaurant, she orders the most expensive dishes on the bill of fare, there's nothing doing so far as you are concerned. She's grafting what she can get in the present because she does not expect to be interested in your future.

On the other hand, if a girl is in love with you she's always wanting you to save. She'll suggest the movies as a substitute for the theatre, and thinks ice cream plenty good refreshment on a festive occasion. She has mercy on your pocketbook, because she is hoping that some day it will be her own, and that the more economical you are in the present, the sooner you will be able to marry.

Take heed also to a maiden's conversation on domestic topics. As long as Saline scoffs at the kitchen, and scorns the sewing machine, and calls babies brats, she isn't in love with you or any other man. But the minute a girl falls in love, she is converted to domesticity, and she begins to take an interest in housekeeping and to try to learn how to sew. You'll find her better rest of a maiden's sentiments toward you than to take her up a good cook book instead of the latest novel. It's not time you go to see her. If she disdainfully casts it aside, it's a tip to you to hold your tongue; but if she immediately becomes absorbed in reading the recipe to avoid without fear and tell her about that little flat with exposed plumbing and a paper-maché wainscoted dining room that would make the coziest sort of a nest for two.

Test of Your Health

And here's also another sign that never fails. Observe if the girl is worried about your health. It doesn't make any difference whether you are as husky as an ox and never had an ache or pain in your life. Every woman who loves a man believes him to be a frail infant, incapable of taking care of himself, and who can only be kept alive by her tender solicitude. And she is frantically convinced that it is liable to be run over by a street car or lost in a crowd unless she worries over him.

So take heed as to whether Gladys Gwendoline insists on your wearing rubbers and muffing up your throat and keeping out of a draught and giving up smoking. If she lets you go out into the rain without an umbrella, and doesn't make you telegraph if you arrive safely as soon as you get to Philadelphia, she's not in love with you. But if she telephones to know if you got home without being kidnapped—then, and being pricing wedding rings, for she's made up her mind to take care of you through life, and the first thing you know you will be giving her a legal right to do it.

Try these signs and tokens and the temperature of a maiden's affection be accurately gauged.

I AM serenely. Though passions beat like mighty billows on my helpless heart. I know beyond them lies the perfect sweet serenity which patience can impart. And when wild tempests in my bosom rage, "Peace, peace!" I cry; "I am my heritage."

I am good health. Though fevers rack my brain And rade disorders mutilate my strength, A perfect restoration after pain. I know shall be my recompense at length. And so through grievous day and sleepless night "Health, health!" I cry; "I am my own right."

I am success. Though hungry, cold, I chafe, I wander for a while, I smile and say, "It is but for a time—I shall be glad." Tomorrow, for my fortune comes my way. God is my father, He has wealth untold; His wealth is mine—health, happiness and gold.
